A Quick List on Common Postcard Mistakes by Irene Thompson

Article published on January 23rd 2012 | Advertising

Every business owner will want to go for cheap marketing materials. Because not everyone has the budget of multimillion companies, they want to look for ways to promote their business effectively without the hefty price tag. Fortunately, there are a lot of materials these days that will allow you to do that. If you want to go traditional and use printed marketing materials, you can invest in postcards.

They are cheap, effective, handy, and impressive. Postcard printing may not be a new tool but it sure will bring good results to your business. What's best is you don't need to invest a lot of effort in it. You can easily design it and send it to your target customers. However, if you want to get the most out of your cards, you have to be aware of the common mistakes business owners commit when doing postcard marketing. What are these mistakes? Here's a quick list of them:

1. Targeting the wrong market. It's easy to send your custom postcards to just about anyone, but you have to make sure that you are sending your cards to the right people so you can maximize the results. It will help if you get a mailing list so you know that you are not wasting your money on the wrong people. A little research will help you find the appropriate customers. You have to determine the age, gender, income, and location of your target audience. This will help you determine which people will respond best to your campaign.

2. Creating an overly creative card. In your desire to get noticed at once, something you tend to go overboard with your design. You try to incorporate fancy design elements and embellishments which instead of giving you a good image make your message and image confusing instead. It is important that you make your design as simple as possible so you can easily and directly communicate your message. If you make it easy for your customers to understand your message, they will more likely respond at once.

3. Not sending the cards consistently. You have to build recognition and familiarity on your customers in order to motivate them to look at your offers. If you send your cards for two consecutive weeks and then stop, you won't help your customers remember you. It is best if you send your cards to the same list for some weeks or even months so your target customers can get familiar with you. If you do this well, it will be so much easier for you to close sales.

4. Having errors or typos on the cards. A card that has lots of errors or typos won't look credible and professional. People will think that you are not a competent business. This is why it is important that you check your cheap postcards before printing. You can even ask a friend or family to check the template for you in case you missed some typos.

5. Printing unprofessionally. Remember that the overall look of your card will reflect on you. If you insist on printing on your own even if you are not an expert printer, you only risk your chance of gaining people's trust. It is best if you just leave the print job in the hands of the experts.

Postcards are effective marketing materials, if done well. Make sure to avoid the mistakes above to ensure your marketing campaign will go on as smoothly as possible.
