There are many functions of cupolas that have made it sell like hot cake. This is one reason that goes to explain why the demand for this item has increased manifold in recent years. Among all these the most important is its capability which enhances the aesthetic appeal of the building that is praiseworthy.

Ordinarily, these cupolas are placed at the rooftop with a different intention. For instance, it serves as a perfect item that provides immense protection, acts as a vent, provides sufficient room for seeing at a larger distance, provides insulation, serves as an ideal place for a speaker, used for controlling the quantity of light that should be entering the building, enhancing the architectural beauty, etc.

When an item such as the roof cupolas has so many benefits, it is obvious to find immense response from its target buyers. It may be noted, this product first found its application within the Muslim community. They were the ones who were regularly seen using it for their worship buildings such as mosques. It was here that they provided the necessary protection to people that came to pray.

The same roof cupolas were used by the Christians for enhancing looks of a church. Because it has some small slits or windows, it serves exceedingly well when it comes to play the role of a vent. Presence of slits or windows gives you a liberty to close or open it at your discretion. A lot of people can be seen opening up the slits in summers because it facilitates escaping of hot air. As a result of this, the entire building experiences a lot of cooling effect. In a sense, in those formative years when this item first found its application, it essentially played the role of an AC! Similarly, closing of these slits during winters added more warmth to the building making it comfortable to the people inside the building. In other words we can say that, they acted as the true insulators.
