Umbrella Companies: Preparing You for the Tax Storm by Ed Lebbon

Article published on January 26th 2012 | Article Marketing

Tax, taxation and tax affairs simply put are deemed as the most difficult to handle in companies. Big or small, private or public, companies do a great deal of paperwork over tax affairs and accountancy issues. This is where umbrella companies step into the picture.

What exactly are umbrella companies and how do contractors benefit from such? Basically, umbrella companies provide services set by their contractors. Umbrella companies act as employers to the contractors who have a signed agreement under a contract. These umbrella companies also process payrolls for contractors and aside from that they also offset expenses against the contractor's tax incurred by the business. These expenses include but are not limited to accommodation expenses and travel expenses.

Benefits of umbrella companies are exactly the same as any other employment rights in a direct employment relationship. Aside from being entitled to paternity and maternity leave, auspices of benefits also include entitlement of contractor's sickness leave. Other advantages of umbrella companies are as follows: no worrying over expenses or taxation's which in turn eliminates legislative concern over the IR35, opportunity in investment of training courses and pension schemes plus greatly reduce amount of paperwork. Other benefits also include accommodation and food allowances, travel and mileage expenses plus insurance to cover for the contractors. The great thing about umbrella companies, salary is never delayed because everything is done on time to make sure everyone is paid on time.

What else do umbrella companies do? Umbrella companies act out as an intermediate between the agency and the contractor. Essentially, umbrella companies keep each party happy by making sure the agency pays the client and contractors don't lose out on benefits. Umbrella companies aside from holding up the end of tax affairs also protect contractor's interests meaning you never get exposed to the wrong end of the law.

Exactly why do people then choose to go work for umbrella companies? Umbrella companies offer independence and freedom which is not easily done by individuals who have no experience whatsoever in accounting and even in filing tax returns. Tax affairs are indeed "taxing" thus umbrella companies do the better and efficient way of handling tax.

Umbrella companies assure that everyone is always in touch with the cash they work hard for. They ensure that you can claim all expenses back as long as you are entitled to it. Contractors and umbrella companies form a partnership unlike any other. Provided that correct receipts are handed to them for all expenses then umbrella companies do all the job of reclaiming the money. No stress on your part whatsoever.

As mentioned above, umbrella companies greatly take the load of your shoulders by doing all the necessary paperwork when it comes to tax affairs and accounting issues. Contractors can relax and have a peace of mind knowing that all their tax affairs are in good hands.
