

Article Side

Avail of Ireland solicitor's advice to ensure smooth handling of personal injury claims processes by Hendrymark

Article published on July 12th 2012 | Article Writing

If you have suffered a personal injury, then you must know how traumatic and difficult the situation can be. Often the injury not only means physical suffering and pain but it can be mentally stressful too. The person may develop kind of phobia, anxiety and depression after such an experience.

Handling such situations on your own can be really demanding. You may not know how to deal with insurance companies professionally or complete medical procedures. You may not have an independent medical advice and report. You may not be aware of the true extent of your injuries and suffering at that specific stage or in the future. Most importantly you might not be very sure of your legal rights and entitlements. So, if you come to a hasty settlement with the insurance company or the offender then most probably you may not be offered the best deal. This is why it is advisable to seek legal and medical guidance in time. Ireland solicitor's advice ensures that you get a fair deal and receive the appropriate amount of compensation which you deserve.

At the very beginning you need to know if you are within the specific time limit to make the personal injury claim. To make such a claim in Ireland you get a maximum time limit of two years from the date of accident. Often you may become aware of the compensation process at a later stage say after six months from the date of accident. To avoid delay and lose the chance of getting a fair compensation you need Ireland solicitor's advice on the time within which you will have to file for compensation.

There are two routes through which you can recover compensation for personal injuries you have suffered. One is the Court and the other is InjuriesBoard.ie (previously known as The Personal Injuries Assessment Board or PIAB). The latter is an independent statutory body, which was established in 2004 with the aim of simplifying the compensation process. First it assesses how much compensation you can claim as the injured party. Further their proceedings help in reducing administrative expenses and fees related to the claims process. The board also conducts proceedings such that the claims get settled within minimum time. In fact, this statutory body is considered better than the Court because it awards the same level of compensation as the Court does but often at a faster rate and without too high litigation costs.

Guidance from an experienced solicitor can give a totally different shape to the claim process. While you may take steps as an amateur, a professional will do it with precision after assessing the case thoroughly. The main advantage of contacting an able solicitor from Ireland is that he does a free case assessment to analyze different options you have. This is the best and cost effective way to proceed. After the assessment is done and you feel that it is worth proceeding then you can give final nod to the solicitor.

Article Source:

<http://www.articleside.com/article-writing-articles/avail-of-ireland-solicitor-s-advice-to-ensure-smooth-handling-of-personal-injury-claims-processes.htm> - Article Side

Hendrymark - About Author:

Hendry Mark has been closely associated with a reputed solicitor firm based at Ireland and have closely monitored several personal injury claims processes. He has shared valuable information in few of his online articles on how to avail of a Ireland solicitor's advice

Article Keywords:
Ireland solicitor's advice

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!