An introduction to promotional umbrellas by Mary Porter

Article published on June 21st 2012 | Business

Most of us have encountered promotional umbrellas at some point in our life. Along with other branded corporate merchandise in the form of things like promotional pens they are important marketing tools which pay dividends for firms in all sorts of industries. Promotional umbrellas are therefore seen as a good buy by many companies as a means of promoting their products and image. Therefore without further ado here is a guide to these essential accessories:

Promotional umbrellas are umbrellas which have been customised to carry the colours of a firm, team or other kind of organisation. They are just one of a range of useful items which can be specially designed for promotional purposes. Promotional umbrellas are therefore part of the marketing mix.

For many people the beauty of promotional umbrellas is that they are functional devices which have a practical use. Obviously umbrellas are used to avoid getting soaked through when it rains and are consequently widely used with the wet British climate. Therefore promotional umbrellas are useful products which prove popular with the punters because they can be put to good use.

Promotional umbrellas can either be given as complimentary gifts or sold. The former is the more popular option as many business owners who have a good brand use them to build up general awareness by giving them to business contacts and potential clients.

Typically promotional umbrellas “ just like promotional pens “ are adorned with company logos and special font carrying the company name. Slogans can also be used to convey anything from a mission statement to a joke.

Where can I find a supplier of top quality promotional umbrellas?

When it comes to things like promotional umbrellas you really need to find a specialist supplier as they are not exactly the sort of thing that you can find by browsing the shops on the high street. One company which manufactures all sorts of superb promotional umbrellas as well as other corporate merchandise such as promotional pens can be found at Arcadiaonline.co.uk.
