Earn on Chinese eBay: money making ideas by James

Article published on April 13th 2012 | Business

Today, there is no stability in the workplace. Gone are the days where an employee would look forward to a promising retirement after working for the same company year after year. In addition, many students are graduating college with thousands of dollars in debt but no certainty of a secure job. Indeed, the times are changing. However, as some doors are closing, others open widely. It is sometimes just a matter of keeping your eyes wide open to the possibilities around you. In this article, we will explore some possible money making ideas that, if implemented right, can result in successful business ventures.

The first money making idea we will talk about will be Taobao, a website which technically serves as the Chinese eBay. Today, Taobao is the biggest winner in the Chinese online auction-sphere. With over 370 million registered users and more than 800 million listings, Taobao is well positioned for the great economic changes that are about to occur. Today, China is the world's greatest creditor nation while the United States is the world's greatest debtor nation. After years hard work, Chinese workers have saved the fruits of their labor and are waiting for the chance to spend their hard earned money on products and services that, up to now, only their American counterparts were enjoying.

Taobao, then, offers a perfect opportunity to position yourself for the unprecedented market growth around the corner. The secret of your success will be on doing the research. By analyzing what niches are popular or are on the rise, you will be able to come up with products that will satisfy a need or want your Chinese customers. The next step will then be to list your product and grow your Taobao business. Another key to your success will be your team. By partnering with capable and creative individuals who can also speak Chinese fluently, you will be one step ahead to succeed in what will soon be, if it is not already, the world's greatest economic power.

If the auction-sphere is not your thing or selling abroad through the Chinese eBay does not attract you, then we have a second suggestion: taking advantage of wholesalers in China to sell products here at home. While the United States has made it virtually impossible to manufacture products at home profitably due to the taxes and regulations, China has streamlined the process. As a result, the Chinese have developed a manufacturing infrastructure capable of producing any product you envision. But creating a new product is not the only possibility. Through websites like Alibaba.com and ChinaVision.com, you can browse through thousands of manufacturers, suppliers, exporters, and wholesales to find the product you would like to sell here at home!

Without a doubt, we are living through some of the most difficult economic times in the last two centuries. However, as we have seen in this article, not every door is closed. By analyzing the markets and becoming aware of the situation in other parts of the world, it is possible to come up with money making ideas that can really spice up your life and finances!
