Of course, there are lots of scammers out there targeting inexperienced resellers. But before avoiding reliable sites like the esources portal, fearing scams, you must do a bit of background research.

Online retailers depend on the reviews in trade directories and forums to locate trustworthy wholesale companies. While browsing through such reviews, retailers often come across lots of references to scams. In fact, there are innumerable articles and posts discussing the different kinds of scams prevalent in the dropshipping field. While most reviews do a great job of exposing fraudulent companies, others—like the reports on esources.co.uk scams—are fabricated. Instead of trusting these fake reviews and ignoring these websites, you must make an effort to uncover the truth behind these reports.

So What Is the Truth?

When you go online to search for wholesaler reviews and keep stumbling across posts related to an esources.co.uk scam, you must first understand the reason why such fake reports are so widely publicized. The esources portal is not just another dropship directory focused on generating income by offering paid memberships in exchange for accurate and updated information on wholesalers and retailers. The purpose of this website is to provide genuine and verified information that resellers and suppliers seek.

To ensure that the information posted on the site is absolutely reliable and trustworthy, the esources portal is empowered with a big team of professionals who verify every bit of information before it goes online. Another fact that will expose the fake nature of esources.co.uk scam is that this website has strict guidelines about the kinds of wholesalers that are added to their database. Because the website considers only those suppliers who have proven their reliability with years of excellent service, there is no chance for fraudulent companies to find their way into the website. These strict measures help keep scammers away and ensure the trustworthiness of the portal.

Verifying the details entered by wholesalers is just one of the techniques that the website uses to ensure accurate information. Genuine wholesale companies readily offer all necessary documents required for completing the verification process. The fraudulent companies that fail to get their businesses listed on the trade directory because of the stringent policies of the website express their dissatisfaction by creating false news on an esources.co.uk scam and providing maximum publicity for the fake reports.

Remember that the esources website is portrayed this way just because they go that extra mile to verify the information they post and not because they are involved in any fraudulent practices.

Scammers who have suffered serious losses due to the poor reviews on the esources portal are the ones behind those innumerable reports on the esources.co.uk scam. So, the right thing to do is ignore those reports and utilize the information on the website to grow your business.
