Protecting Your Assets with a divorce attorney, Northfield, NJ by .

Article published on November 25th 2011 | Business

When going through a divorce, we always hope that we can end things peacefully, and that our former partner will see things likewise. Unfortunately, thatâ€™s not always the case. Sometimes, your partner may want to take you for whatever they can. Other times, it may be a simple disagreement on what exactly is owed by whom to whom. When it comes to protecting your assets, here are three tips you canâ€™t afford to forget when it comes to family law, Northfield, NJ and hiring a divorce attorney, Northfield, NJ.

Hire an Attorney Right Away

If you donâ€™t hire a divorce attorney, Northfield, NJ right away, at least see an attorney for a counseling. Many attorneys are willing to offer a free counseling. Itâ€™s a good way to get clients, and they can help you figure out whether or not you really need an attorney in the first place. In some instances, the divorce might not get messy in the first place and you can get away with just making a personal agreement. Thatâ€™s not always the case, though. If itâ€™s going to trial, if itâ€™s going through courts, then you need a divorce attorney, Northfield, NJ.

Be Honest

Hiding your assets and income during a divorce might seem like a great idea, but it really isnâ€™t. Not only can it often result in a judge finding out and siding with the other side, it might also lead to charges of fraud and an audit from the IRS. When you hire a good attorney, theyâ€™ll be able to help you figure out how to retain as much of your own property as possible and as is fair, and theyâ€™ll help you figure out how to do it by the book, not by sneaking things around and creating greater problems for yourself in the long run.

You Have Confidentiality with Your Attorney

Confidentiality with your divorce attorney, Northfield, NJ means that not only is your attorney not required to tell anybody what goes on in his office, heâ€™s not allowed. As long as you donâ€™t tell him about crimes that you are planning to commit, nothing you say within the privacy of his office can be held against you in a court of law. This means that if you have had an affair, if you have money that your partner doesnâ€™t know about, if you have any secrets that youâ€™re not comfortable airing in public you can tell your attorney about it when itâ€™s relevant. The more your lawyer knows, the more options youâ€™re going to have, legally speaking, and itâ€™s best to be completely honest with your attorney in order to make certain that youâ€™re getting the very best legal counsel possible. Whatever financial secrets you might have had during the marriage, you need to air them out with your attorney if you want to keep as much of your fair share as possible.

In the best of cases, both partners should be able to agree to a fair split of their property and assets, but thatâ€™s not always the case. Talk to your attorney and determine a fair course of action.
