Utah lumber is of good quality which is used for construction.

Utah Lumber is wood in any of its stages from felling through readiness for use as building material for construction of building. Individual pieces of Utah lumber exhibit a wide range of quality and appearance with respect to knots, slopes of grain, shakes and other natural characteristics. Utah Lumber varies considerably in strength, utility and value. Lumber is supplied either rough or finished. Besides pulpwood, Utah lumber is the raw material for making furniture and other items which requires additional cutting and shaping. It is available in as hardwoods. Finished lumber is supplied in standard sizes, mostly for the construction industry, primarily softwood from coniferous species including pine, fir, cedar, and hemlock, but also some hardwood, for high-grade flooring. The standards of Utah lumbars have changed over the years to meet the changing needs of manufacturers and distributors, with the goal of keeping lumber competitive with other construction products.
