Roger Hamilton as the Poet of Nature in the World of Wealth Creation by Crowin Smith

Article published on December 17th 2011 | Business

The only poet in the entire spectrum of poets that have ever written lines in the English poetry who has written only about Nature is William Wordsworth. William was the only poet who ever wrote about the beauty, the laughter, and the fun that aptly describes the way life should be lived. And the source from where he derived pleasure and fun and all the beautiful things was the all pervasive Nature. And the lines that he wrote are still read by the people of all age groups and all sexes. And they do it because they know that only these are the lines that can give them the bliss and the love that almost all the people no matter to which domain or field they belong to and no matter to which strata of the society they belong to, long for. William Wordsworth is the only poet that had the capability, and the desire to write the lines that would enlighten the lives of the people across the world and down the generations. And the only other person, who had the vision to see that the ultimate happiness can only be had from the Nature itself, is Roger Hamilton.

And the irony of the situation lies in the fact that Roger Hamilton is active in the field that is completely devoid of anything that is metaphysical or anything closer to it. And that is the only reason why Roger Hamilton decided to part ways with the existing system that completely controls the financial operations of the world. Roger had realized that without emboldening the role of nature in the complex activities of wealth creation, the very system would keep on creating one problem after another. And once Roger found the way in which nature can be incorporated in to the world of finance, all the permissive issues that make their way into the system would be completely eradicated.

And in order to incorporate the role of nature into the act of wealth creation Roger Hamilton formulated the sets of theories that would aptly describe and explain the ways in which nature can be given its due place in the act of wealth creation. One of his theories that have succeeded to a great extent in explaining the real relation between the nature and the activities of the wealth creation is that of wealth dynamics. And the very first step that introduces this concept is that of the wdprofiletest that aptly brings out the original personality type of the individual that is nothing else but the natural flow of the individual. And it is only this natural flow that can really help the individual in getting the wealth that he would then deserve and would definitely get.
