The government of USA is taking several steps that can help the downtrodden people to get back to normal stream of life. Many people in the world are suffering from various kinds of disabilities and physical ailments that have taken away their power to work and earn a living for themselves and their families. For such people different kinds of financial aids and grants are given. However, there are many legal procedures in this and the process is extremely complicated to be able to get those benefits. A disabled person can apply for social security disability benefits but chances are high that in the first instance his claim is going to be rejected.

Usually there are two kinds of benefits that are provided – social security disability benefits and supplemental security income benefits or SSI disability benefits. Whatever be the kind of benefit, you have to apply for the same. Supplemental security income programs are particularly designed for people who are disabled, aged and blind and have limited sources to support themselves and their families. The entire program is administered by the Social Security Administration (SSA). Getting the benefits is not a very easy task. In majority of the cases, the applications are rejected for the first time. Only with assistance from professional attorneys can you get a claim sanctioned.

If you want to apply for SSI disability benefits, there are certain criteria that you need to satisfy. Some of them are as follows:

The person needs to be 65 years of old or more

The person should be legally blind

The person should be able to meet the definition of permanent disability that has been declared by the SSA.

Apart from these, income resources and assets are also checked before a claim is sanctioned. Assets like real estate, equity and cash savings are taken into consideration along with income from various benefit programs, pension and other federal assistance while sanctioning claims for SSI disability benefits.

It is best to apply for social security disability benefits with the help of a social security disability attorney. He knows the tricks of the trade well and can help in getting the claim sanctioned at one go. The application form is a little complicated for common people to understand and all the other documents and evidences have to be arranged as well to get the claim. The case also has to be presented in a convincing manner in the court and can be done by a professional only.
