To award the market to a company which presents an offer the most economically advantageously, the public purchaser uses the selection criteria. To have any chance of securing the contract, you must submit a bid for meets the criteria chosen by the public.

What are the criteria for selecting bids?

The public purchaser can use the selection criteria example outlined in the Procurement Code:

â€¢ The total cost of use: operating costs associated with the use of a supply of a structure, equipment: maintenance, cost of consumption, costs training.

â€¢ The technical quality value: of supply, works or service you are proposing.

Examples: strength of materials, assembly quality, source and strength of supplies, method and process of implementation of services.

â€¢ The innovative nature: what products, services or works that you propose are they innovative with regards to existing solutions?

â€¢ The performance in terms of environmental protection: your offer will be examined under the environmental safeguards that it has (only if the very purpose of the market has environmental impacts).

Examples: the protection of groundwater, the presence of recycled materials in products used...

â€¢ The turnaround time: especially if the buyer's public schedule is very tight.

â€¢ The quality

â€¢ The aesthetic and functional characteristics: including implementation of markets furniture and specific elements of identification, as part of stage designs of exposure.

â€¢ The after-sales service and technical support: for services that require monitoring â€¢ The date and time of delivery: including supply contracts current (food for example) that requires intervention or fast and regular supplies.

â€¢ The price: if the public retains only a single criterion, this criterion must be the price.

â€¢ The performance in terms of professional integration of public difficulty: to promote the employment of employees with special conditions as staff with disabilities or long-term unemployment.

The public purchaser may also use other selection criteria as they relate to the subject of market.

Examples:

? Arrangements to ensure the cleanliness of the site.

? The proximity of the business if the intervention must be very fast and therefore only if proximity is a prerequisite for good performance of the contract.

? Security.

? The ease of use.

Where to find the selection criteria for bids?

You can get a list of selection criteria chosen by the public in the notice call for competition or in the regulation of the consultation. The public purchaser can not use other selection criteria as it states in the notice

Advertising (ACPA) and the Regulations of the consultation (RC).
