Since the 1950s, Marx toys have been touching the heart of millions of children throughout the world. They were awed by the toys that were manufactured by this company. Parents found gifting to be remarkably easy by giving their child these toy soldiers. This made both the child and the parent excited and happy at the same time. As the wars have just concluded during the 1950s, Marx toy soldiers became extremely popular. Action figures were always and till date is one of the most sought after toys for boys. Today the soldiers made by Marx toys are vintage, and people like collecting them as one of the finest example of early toy action figures, made, liked and played by many children located all over the world. "Tycoon" Louis Marx was responsible for the creation of these stunning toy soldiers. Mr Marx was a US sergeant and he very well understood the choice and preference of the children then. Making toys that would attract many; he developed a toy that changed the way of playing for boys. As time passed the like and preferences of children changed, they became much attracted to electronics and gadgets. The sale of Marx toy soldiers decreased. Still today there are many enthusiasts in the market who prefer to collect these toys as vintages, making them more valuable than its worth. Interest of people has gone to such limits that these action figures are developed into video games, so that we can see the modern and a modified version of the same old and famous toy.

Marx toys have long been out of business, but a recent trend analysis shows that the toy soldiers are coming back with a bang..
