What You Need in a divorce attorney, Northfield, NJ by .

Article published on November 28th 2011 | Business

When looking for a divorce attorney, Northfield, NJ is a competitive market. There are a lot of lawyers out there, all trying to get your case. If you want to know the real difference between a good lawyer and a great one, what really makes for a lawyer you can trust, a lawyer you can believe in and a lawyer who can help you to win your case and give you the advice that you need the most, youâ€™ll want to make sure that they meet the following qualifications for your family law, Northfield, NJ case.

Availability

A good divorce attorney, Northfield, NJ should make himself or herself available to you. A lawyer who is always insulating themselves from having to deal with the client by using a whole team of assistants is clearly more concerned with their big money clients than they are with your case. You need a lawyer whoâ€™s going to give you the time of day. The real reason you hire a lawyer is for peace of mind. Even if the lawyer who never meets you in person until the trial wins nine out of ten cases, theyâ€™re not doing much to put your mind at ease.

Experience

It seems like thereâ€™s a new divorce attorney, Northfield, NJ office being opened every weekend. Itâ€™s an attractive career field, to be sure. Most lawyers, far beyond doing it for the pay, do it for the satisfaction of helping those in need, because they see a way to serve their community and because they have a passion for justice and the law. There are a lot of young lawyers out there who may be well intentioned, but might not have the experience that you need when handling a messy divorce or custody hearing. Get a lawyer with experience. Stephen A. Browndorf has more than two decades of experience in family law, and he can put that experience to work for you.

Smart Priorities

Some lawyers are sharks. They go after the other party in a divorce for every penny they can. This is because a bigger settlement, bigger alimony payments, can mean a bigger profit on the case for the attorney handling it. Unfortunately, such an approach can drag a divorce out for years and create permanent emotional rifts between all parties involved. A truly great lawyer is not interested in flexing his abilities to play hardball so much as helping his or her client find peace of mind. That generally means an amicable, equitable settlement. Aggressive courtroom tactics may be employed from time to time to protect the clientâ€™s rights, but keeping the peace and allowing both parties to negotiate a fair conclusion to their divorce should be key in your lawyerâ€™s plan of attack.

Selecting an attorney doesnâ€™t have to be difficult. All you really need to do is make sure that youâ€™re dealing with someone who is experienced, who will deal with you personally, and who prioritizes a relatively painless closure over dragging the case out as long as possible and squeezing every last dime out of it. It can be easy to lose your head during a divorce, so hire an attorney who will help you find peace of mind.
