An introduction to learning requires first an understanding of the concept itself. While different definitions exist for distance , it would be safe to say that mba learning is a teaching method in which the teacher and student are separated in time and place. The concept of distance learning has been around for centuries in the history of mankind, but the use of technology in the modern era has added fuel to the fire and online mba learning given a boost.

Distance learning uses various means and methods to deliver course materials and education for students that could be distributed in different parts of the world. In an introduction to executive learning, we would be correct if we say that mba learning is to give the same experience traditional classroom for students sitting in their living room by the non-class means. Today, executive mba learning uses various means such as regular mail, high-tech tools like the Internet and audio-video conferences to help teachers meet with students and vice versa. Today, a variety of synchronous and asynchronous tools are available for individuals who are involved in mba learning.

Most universities and colleges known worldwide offering online mba courses for students wishing to learn more. The University of distance learning Courses has both Bachelor and Master. The University of also offers undergraduate and graduate students online. The School of Business offers degrees in business of a master for students. The Independence of the University - California College of Health Sciences offers certificates and diplomas in associate, bachelors and master's level health education to people so inclined.

That, in short, was an introduction to executive learning. With the latest technology and tools in the world have indeed become a smaller place, and the impact of the IT boom is reflected in the field of distance education. Today, it is possible for a student sitting in a remote corner of Asia, to pursue a Master of Boston University through the internet.
