Internet viruses seem everywhere online these days, it's to the point where viruses in pop culture are personified by a "worm" that goes around deleting files on your computer and rearranging things.

How about a virus that looks like a good guy, a wolf in sheep's clothing per se. that has a solution, a costly one! It promises to take your computer to the promised land where it can frolic and lavish in an extravagant online lifestyle where the fear of viruses is nonexistent.

Where's the catch in all this? That you're going to have to pay up big, and what happens when you do pay? Nothing, you get billed with the virus still having your computer in lock down. At this point you are lucky if you can go online or view any of your folders. At this point you're probably wondering what to do!

First thing is first, call your credit card company and have them cancel and refund your payment. Chances are this fake virus company is getting flagged with numerous complaints already and you may receive a call first. However don't hesitate and take matters into your own hand and make sure that your accounts haven't been compromised.

Secondly, how are we going to deal with this virus? Chances are you won't have the tools or knowledge to properly remove the virus yourself, so you're going to have to take a trip to the computer repair store. If you want to make sure your information is safe it is highly recommended to take it to the specialists.

We here at USA Computer Store have managed to remove countless Internet Security Viruses and have become incredibly proficient at it. We make sure that the virus is cleansed and that your information remains intact with nothing being lost.

Very funny story happened to me one day when I was a younger lad, as I tended to jump on my father's computer every now and then without his expressed permission. He would always warn me as to which sites I can go to and which to avoid but I didn't care much for danger as I was a brave young whippersnapper indeed.

This was the time where America Online was king and every other person braved the internet which the infamous dialling sound the computer made whenever you were connecting to the internet. There was very little in the terms of antivirus, and what was there to protect your computer was rudimentary at best.

Most common places people would frequent would be the AOL chat rooms and websites you accidentally found through a relatively quick AOL search! The world at my finger tips. Seconds turned to minutes, minutes turned to hours, and hours turned to days.

In retrospect it all seems like such a blur to be consumed by something so new so powerful, it was like an interactive TV which played any show I wanted at any time of the day or night.

I did manage to get myself in trouble here or there but a lot of times it was for gags. One great one I pulled was on good old dad himself, one of my friends had this file that when launched it made it look like your computer turned against itself with every file being eaten by a monster and everything being erased.

And when the fake virus finished its devilish job the screen would go completely green and the words "Have a Nice Day" would transpire on the screen. This in turn made my dad completely freak out and raise his voice which made me burst out in cheery joy.

I laughed as he ran over and I said "I'm just kidding dad!", and with a swift click everything was to normal and my life had been spared. That's all for now everyone and just for the record we are well know for laptop repair Broward and laptop repair Fort Lauderdale.
