

Article published on July 31st 2012 | Cooking

There comes a time when many professional catering businesses need to invest in new equipment for their kitchens or services. All too often though, investing in new kit can prove an expensive outlay, particularly for smaller operators or those just starting up. It is in such instances that catering equipment rental can be so useful.

Even large-scale caterers can benefit from catering equipment rental, particularly when taking on larger jobs where existing kitchens may not be big enough. Catering at outdoor events often calls for a great deal of extra equipment too, and hiring appliances can prove very cost effective.

It is important to choose a firm which understands the industry, has a proven background and good testimonials. It is also essential that they have all the equipment you need. Whilst renting from more than one firm is possible, this usually increases costs and so reduces the cost effectiveness of rental in the first place.

A good catering equipment rental firm will be able to supply ovens and ranges, fryers and sous vides, hot cupboards and coffee machines and everything in between. They should also be able to provide cutlery and crockery, glassware and even disposable catering supplies if you need these for less formal or outdoor events.

Doing business with a catering hire company which has experience of supplying a wide variety of clients is a good idea too. For example, with different appliances and pieces of equipment needed for a party event than for a formal reception, this experience can be invaluable when you finalise exactly what equipment you need. If you have overlooked an item, your supplier will most likely point this out so you won't find yourself with problems on the day of an event.

If you have a high-end event that needs to be catered for, it is also essential to work with a firm that has experience working in this field. From knowing the better china and glassware brands to use to being able to provide high-quality linens and napkins, they will help deliver the perfect experience for your guests. After all, having prepared well thought-out and executed food, it should be presented with just as much distinction.

When looking at kitchen equipment hire, you also need to consider delivery costs and restrictions. A good supplier should provide coverage across the country and deliver appliances on site in plenty of time for events, without the need for overnight storage.

When it comes to returning items, check whether the company you choose for your catering equipment will take back soiled equipment. With washing and cleaning taking up so much time after an event, this can be hugely beneficial. For crockery and glassware too, having this policy means breakages are likely to be significantly reduced.

For a great many firms working in the food and drink industry, renting their catering equipment is often seen as a very sensible choice. Whether as part of an on-going strategy to have access to the latest appliances, or for hosting larger jobs, catering equipment rental can really be a huge benefit.

Article Source:

<http://www.articleside.com/cooking-articles/discover-how-catering-equipment-rental-could-help-your-business.htm> - Article Side

Ian Franklin - About Author:

Ian has worked in the catering industry since leaving catering college over ten years ago. He currently writes for Alliance Online on subjects such as a catering equipment. See more at <http://www.allianceonline.co.uk>

Article Keywords:

catering equipment, kitchen equipment, restaurant equipment, bar equipment, glassware, crockery, chef's whites, catering equipment in London

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!