Online dating tips for NYC singles by Truconnection

Article published on July 7th 2012 | Dating

If you are single and plan to be online dating in NY, it's critical that you understand the online dating landscape so that you can maximize your experience while mitigating the potential for danger or discomfort. For singles, NYC can be a terrific place to meet someone online, but one must be smart and careful.

First, it is imperative that, no matter what dating site you choose, you do not list all of your personally identifiable information on the dating site. NYC, sadly, has a reputation for having many capable hackers and scammers. If you list your full name, email address and date of birth on a dating site, you are leaving yourself vulnerable to identity theft.

Second, when you meet someone when dating in NY, make sure your first date is in a very public place. Keep in mind that you do not know this person at all; he/she may be great, but they may not be. To protect yourself, be sure you are never alone with them. After the date, don't let them walk you back to your home; even if the date goes well. It's not a good idea to let a stranger know where you live, especially if there is no second date.

Third, it's very important that you choose the right dating site in NYC. NYC is home to hundreds of dating sites – some that you will want to check out, but many in which you will have no interest. For example, there are dating sites devoted to dog lovers, stamp collectors, and virtually every other niche. Make sure to do your homework on these sites so you're not wasting time.

Along those lines, it may be wise to check out some of the newer sites NYC has to offer. Rather than rely on lengthy profiles and personality tests, many of these new dating sites are more creative in how they match singles. For example, one popular new site allows singles to write and meet others. Members see only other members' photo and their writing, artwork, or photography. The idea behind this site is that one's creative self-expression and photo is the best first impression when meeting online, and more telling of one's character than detailed self-description.

Finally, and perhaps most importantly, make sure to have fun in your quest to meet other singles. NYC is one of the greatest cities on the planet, and it has an endless amount of fun activities for singles and couples. If you are careful in your approach to online dating, find the site that is best for you, and explore some of the new exciting sites, you will have a great opportunity to enjoy this tremendous place.
