Article published on July 16th 2012 | Destinations

There are many types of fantastic views that one can get from Mallorca Islands which have plenty of quaint towns all over the respective islands. Besides the fantastic beach offerings, there are numerous ancient historical monuments to be appreciated. These monuments showcase the history of the Mallorca and the present day development on the island. There are also many quaint fishing villages and ports which one would find interesting.

Tranquility is a definite given on Mallorca; a holiday here would refresh the visitor.

Ancient monuments

There is the Son Mas house palace and Sam Telmo which is another popular port near Andraitx. One can also sight the 16th century fortress with the Sa Trapa Monastery ruins nearby. Soller has plenty of manorial homes with Neo-Gothic churches and museums. There is also the famous Biniaraix which sports a most unique Mallorquinian architecture. Sa Calobra has a most interesting Lluc monastery which is positioned at one of Mallorca's highest peaks.

Pollençia is another picturesque village in Mallorca which not only offers splendid panorama but also ancient monuments such as the 16th century Atalaya de Formentor tower, the 14th century Castell del Rei ruins, the Santa Maria Greco-Roman Parraquia de los Angeles and the Puig de Maria sanctuary which has a 14th century oratory.

Beautiful landscapes

There is always some natural amazement along the journey from one Mallorca town to another. Along the way from Andraitx, one would view some beautiful cultures of almonds and olives in Puigpunyent. There is a charming port at Valldemosa and the quaint village of Deià showcases beautiful architectonical constructions that blend remarkably with nature. Another attraction is Deià's unique cemetery.

Soller is an interesting town in Mallorca with a unique tramway to the local port and fishing port. Narrow mountain roads along Soller lead one through splendid landscapes before viewing the great peaks of Mallorca. Small villages along the way make the journey pleasant with some time to wander around to appreciate the local hospitality.

Pollençia is one of the most picturesque towns in Mallorca with its special location at the foothills. The splendid panorama offered here draws many tourists throughout the year. There are local museums and fishing ports which allow one to discover the past and present of the region. These have become popular with artists and art lovers as well as history buffs. There are great beaches such as Playa de Formentor and Cala de San Vicente which offer tourists a great time in getting a good tan and great fun with the many water activities available.
