One of Spain's famous coastlines is Costa Calida besides Costa del Sol. Costa Calida has many exciting offerings that draw large crowds during the summer. Its pleasant climate throughout the year gives Mazarron Bay the favorable microclimate of enjoying over 300 sunshine days in the year.

The town at Costa Calida is simple with some well preserved buildings like the prominent Town Hall, Velez Castle ruins and some churches.

The Mazarron Bay at Costa Calida offers a most picturesque coastline where one can reach the quaint little town of Aguilas which was once an ancient Roman fishing port. The places that are worth visiting here include Plaza Espa±a, village gardens, San Jose church, the ornate Town Hall, the 1579 castle and the old harbor.

Murcia as Costa Calida's capital is also pretty with a lot of history. A plethora of historic monuments can be found here; well preserved city walls, churches and mosques are among some interesting ancient monuments. The city Cathedral is its pride and joy with a 1388 foundation laid by the reverend Bishop Pedrosa. This cathedral took four centuries before it opened its gates; hence, one can definitely spot the various styles and cultures at its 23 chapels.

The ancient monuments at almost all corners of Murcia make the whole city very rich in culture and history. These monuments have been well maintained in their original condition with much costly restorations.

The 1784 Bishop's Palace was built close to the grand Cathedral with the Santa Ana Convent Church about the same century. The San Miguel Church and the 1602 Almudi are other interesting historical monuments.

The local museum displays a host of historical information from pre-Roman to Roman era with cultures and customs that have greatly impacted the lifestyle at Costa Calida.

There is always something to celebrate in Costa Calida. One can feel right at home in the variety of fiestas and festivals that are frequently happening here. Every fiesta celebrated here is vibrant and intense.

The nightlife and weekends are vibrant and exciting with the presence of youths from the local university. Hence, it is not surprising to find many bars and pubs around the campus and town.
