Have you started your master thesis?

But you can not come up with a good topic for it?

Try these easy steps

Easy steps to show you how to pick up a history dissertation title:

1.Topic of your interest:

As you know, thesis requires a lot of research work. You will have to investigate for more than a year or so. So it is better that you choose a theme that is of your personal interest. So that you can bear with the long research work involved with writing. Do not just do it for the sake of getting grades! You have to have your full heart in the project, only then you will be able to cope up with it till the end. Usually students tend to choose topics from their recent or previous courses of study.

2.Background knowledge:

You should have a lot of background information on your matter, so that you know which areas of that subject you have to investigate.

3.Make a list:

Make a list of all the themes that are coming in your mind. And then select the one that you think is most appropriate and interesting.

4.Research other topics:

Research other thesis to make sure that nobody else has a similar theme. Also investigate if some research was already done on this subject.

5.Make the topic specific:

Make sure that you are investigating on only one aspect of the subject. You should answer only one question at a time to avoid any confusion between the concepts of your writing. For example, if your interest is how media is influencing people, then your topic should be How western movies are influencing children. In this way you will have only one area to investigate, and you will be able to answer your research question more effectively and wisely.

6.Research sources:

Your research should be up to date. The statistics, comparisons, news articles or facts that you are using should be pertaining to the recent date and not years old. Otherwise they will be too out dated, and would not be relevant. If there is not enough recent information available, then it is suggested that you change your subject.

7.Thesis and career:

It is recommended that you choose a subject that also relates to your future career. Choose that field in which you are going to pursue your career. This will broaden your span of study and open more options to you. Your hard work should not go into the dustbin after your degree comes in your hands, but it should be useful even after graduation.

8. Phrasing:

Do not make long topics. They look very unattractive.

Choosing topics of history dissertations is no more a difficulty. Just follow these guidelines, and you will be able to come up with an excellent theme. It should complement the thesis and the research question.
