All professionals must update and modify their existing skill set with the help of continuing education. This includes CPAs, who must struggle with the time constraints of their practice when trying to maintain their license and refresh their knowledge and skills by taking CPA continuing education. In addition, there are different rules regarding CPE that CPA's need to check before taking a CPE course. These requirements are decided by the state CPA boards that govern the profession of CPA's within a respective state. If, for instance, you are a CPA practicing in the state of California, the rules of California CPE will be applicable to you.

Effective 1st January, 2010, the California Board of Accountancy has mandated fresh rules for CPA CONTINUING EDUCATION. According to the rules, 80 hours of CPE should be completed with each 24 month renewal period to stay active as a CPA in the state of California. These 80 hours of CPE are subject to a minimum of 20 hours of CPE each year. In addition, 12 out of 20 hours should have been spent on just studying technical subjects (taxation, accounting, and auditing). MasterCPE is a CPE sponsor who provides many technical CPE courses in its list of courses. Within its wide range of courses in auditing, accountancy, taxation, a CPA is sure to find a course that meets their interests or expertise.

As an example, one such technical course at MasterCPE is "Accounting for Earnings Per Share", where the CPA can learn all the rules and regulations for recording the level of gains or losses for shares of stock.

CPAs can earn 6 CPE credits by completing this course. The price of this course is $49.95 at MasterCPE. The California Board of Accountancy also requires that the CPA's must take CALIFORNIA CPE from a CPE sponsor who provides "interactive" CPE, which means the course material provides lesson reviews and final exams. MasterCPE is an interactive CPE sponsor. A CPA using online CPE at MasterCPE can save their answers at any time, for later review and completion. This provides a flexible and convenient way to schedule CPE around a busy CPA's day. MasterCPE offers a wide variety of interactive online CPE courses on its website meeting the California CPA CPE requirements.
