The Coordination between Parents and Teacher by Osa Webmasterone

Article published on December 5th 2011 | Education

Do you think that your responsibility get over after admitting your child in a renowned school? Parents always spend their maximum time in hunting good school for the child. When they come up with good school, they admit their child and have a relax feeling that their responsibility is over. They don't know that there are lots of things which should be taken care of even after admitting their child in the best school of the locality. Parents expect lots from their children and when the children score less, they start losing their temper. They don't even bother to find out the cause why the child has poor performance. They simply blame the child or the teachers for that thing.

A positive parent-teacher relationship enables the child to feel good and it also let them to be successful in school. This positive relation will let the parents and the teacher as well know about the child more and their habit. "It demonstrates to your child that he can trust his teacher, because you do. This positive relationship makes a child feel like the important people in his life are working together." There would be one more benefit that the child won't be able to hide anything from their parents because they will have a fear that their parents can communicate with their class teachers. Many parents don't like to interact with the teachers because they feel hesitant and they don't like to hear their child's complain. Positive parent- teacher communication benefit parents as it show the home involvement with the children's learning. They get idea from school on how to help and guide their children. Parents develop a greater appreciation for the important role they play in their children's education. Research also proved that parental involvement let the teachers free and they have to focus less on the children. Also, by having more contact with parents, teachers learn more about students' needs and home environment. Parents who are involved tend to have a more positive view of teachers, which results in improved teacher morale.

It is essential to have a two-way communication between families and schools as it give a way for the child success. They get the chance to share relevant information with each other about a student. It should not be always like that the teacher will call the meeting when the child does any mistake. They should also do this when the child perform well because appreciation encourage the child in many ways. When the child knows this fact that their parents and teacher is in regular touch with each other then they will become more conscious and serious about their study.
