According to data from the Ministry of Education, University and Research, enrollment in degree courses in the academic year 2009-2010 decreased by 2.39% over the previous year. It is assumed that the choice to terminate the studies of children is caused by the economic crisis and the difficulty of families to meet the costs that the university brings. But what it costs to maintain a child to college?

The rate on income:

The cost of tuition fees and timing of payments vary from university to university. The annual average is 70,000 for the humanities and 1,20,000 for scientific ones. But the amount varies depending on family income, which must be declared in the self-certification form attached to enrollment. This payment is usually in two installments (enrollment and spring). Disabled people with a disability equal to or greater than 60%, studentâ€™s winnersâ€™ scholarships and women who interrupt their studies for maternity leave, are categories exempted from the payment of installments.

The high price of books:

Another important item of expenditure for students at the University is the cost of books, which varies depending on the faculty. A serial can get to spend between 2500 to 4000 INR. The idea the sale of used books and the exchange practices have consolidated enough, even if the professors recommend the purchase of the latest editions because they are more updated. An alternative is to get the books library or many students resort to the practice of photocopy the texts. The law does allow you to play only a part of the book and not the entire work.

The housing problem:

The costs increase significantly when a child enrolls in a faculty away from home. This means having to rent a room, always eat out and have a series of charges. To find an accommodation you can view the notices on the bulletin board of the university, but it is essential requiring a regular contract. The costs vary from city to city and on whether the room that rent is shared or is personal, ranging from a minimum of 2500 at 5000 INR for a single room in apartment convenient to transport and faculty. An alternative is to rent housing the student's home: Facilities provided by the entities for the right to study their costs low enough. However, the beds are reduced and you have to "run" as it exits the call.

Meals and Transport:

Good compromises for those who live away from home and have to eat are the university canteens and the prices are linked to the income bracket, and in principle will spend about 2000 per month. Or there is refreshment facilities affiliated with the university. Even transport, both for those who live away from home, both for students commuters, Affect the monthly cost 500 to 1000 INR, making passes and discount cards.

Well, in order to come over these problems, many high affiliated universities offer distance education degree programs where the courses are well affiliated by global education authorities. Apart from these many accredited distance education degree programs also open their doors for middle income students in order to raise literacy rate of global economy.
