If you're looking to rejuvenate those dusty, broken-backed family heirloom chairs you have positioned round your equally old dining room table, you might be a little daunted to consider antique furniture repair as your first option.

Taking matters into your own hands, you attempt a rudimentary antique furniture repair in the oily confines of your garage, sanding and finely chiselling away at the faded ligneous ornamentations of your carved-backs until ...until you've ruined them. Oh dear.

So I hope you've learnt your lesson. Antique furniture repair is a delicate undertaking. That's why it needs a specialist's touch; the well trained hands of a delicate soul.

Specialising in antique furniture repair, Regency Restoration are a company who pride themselves on their quality furniture service, benefitting from their many years of experience within the repair and restoration industry.

Having built a reputation for themselves over the years, thanks to their expert antique furniture repair, Regency Restoration strive to ensure that your furniture is well taken care of, spruced up beyond all expectations, looking as handsome as a gentleman's moustache on a crisp autumnal day.

Experts in wood finishing, their antique furniture repair techniques have been passed on from generation to generation by skilled craftsmen.

In addition to their antique furniture repair, Regency Restoration also specialise in a number of other services which include, but aren't limited to, providing estimates for insurance claims, colour matching, antiquing and distressed finishes and hand French polishing.
