Turn to a Pet Boarder when You Have to Go Away by Jercyjohn

Article published on February 14th 2012 | Family

Pet boarding is a great option when you are going away and you need your pet to stay in a safe place. There are several pet boarding on the market these days and most of them are professionals who can help you and your pet out.

However, before you decide on a pet boarder, make sure that it is the right choice. Never go solely by the look or feel of an online webpage when it comes to a pet boarding website. If you are checking online, you may find that the pet boarding company is not as it seems when you view it in person. You can always use the Internet to do the precursory search but always visit the facility prior to sending your beloved pet there while you are away. When you visit the facility here are some things to be aware of prior to making a final decision:

1. Make sure that the pet boarding company is clean, neat and organized. There should be no pet waste lying on the ground and the facility should be run in an orderly way.
2. The staff should also be friendly and tolerant of the pets there. A pet boarder should be able to deal with all the pets in a patient and nice way. They should not be shouting at the animals at any time. Should you see any evidence of this, leave immediately and do not send your pet there.
3. Find out what kind of pet food they give to the pets in their care. Also, ask if they prepare special food for animals which are on specific diets.
4. You should ask to see the living quarters of the pets as you want to be sure that the spaces are large enough, well-ventilated, clean and odor-free.
5. You can also inquire about their play time to make sure they have plenty of fun time to run around and play. The pets should have plenty of room to roam and get their necessary exercise, all the while staying safe.

Keep the above points in mind when you are looking for a good pet boarding facility. Ask all questions you are eager to find out about and leave your pet only if you are completely satisfied. You should always expect top-notch service as you will be leaving your pet there for a while when you are out of town.
