It may be quite difficult for some consumers to make a firm decision on the type of car leasing schemes or contracts to take on with the wide selection of features available in each contract. It is best for the wise consumer to undertake some research on car leasing first before taking on any car leasing contract. Some of the available features may not be too attractive to the individual consumers as they would to the business companies.

Consultant input

One of the best avenues to take when considering the best car leasing schemes is to consult the experts. These would be qualified and experienced leasing consultants from established and reputable leasing companies or financial institutions which can advise on the most suitable car leasing features for the consumer or business.

These consultants are well versed with not only the car leasing features; they are also alert to the changing scenarios of the leasing market and industry. They are well furnished with the latest information to know the best car leasing option available in the market for the different models and consumers; be it private or business based.

The consultants are familiar with all car leasing options including Contract Hire and Personal Contract Hire; car or van leasing.

Warranties

A warranty is very crucial in any car leasing contract; this is to protect the consumer in any car leasing deal. A warranty is meant to ensure a smooth usage of the leased car throughout its lease so that the consumer would be able to maximize the car's potential for maximum benefits.

Some car leases allow extended warranties; these have to be enquired by the consumer as some unscrupulous leasing companies may withhold the information or offer. Most car leases offer the standard car leasing warranty by the vehicle manufacturer but not extended warranties which can cover more aspects of the leased vehicle. Some leasing firms offer extended warranties at an extra charge.

Maintenance

Maintaining the leased car is one of the most important activities which the consumer can take on. Any car that is properly and regularly maintained would not give any trouble to its user in its running; there is no worry of unexpected breakdowns as the car would be kept in tip-top condition through regular diligent maintenance.

However, maintenance is an option in many car leasing schemes. There may be an added cost into the car leasing contract with the inclusion of maintenance. Most businesses leasing company fleets would include maintenance in their leasing contracts; individual consumers may not always include the maintenance option due to the extra cost incurred.
