Any surgical procedure that results in the correction or restoration of the original human form and function can be termed as a cosmetic surgery. As the name suggests, Cosmetic Surgery India deals with the surgeries that introduce cosmetic changes on the human body, namely altering the physical appearance, namely visible facial and bodily changes. They bring about changes for a more aesthetic look. Beautification of the body with all the known medical knowledge and surgery has become very common these days. Medical aestheticians are found at dermatologists, hospitals, laser skin care clinics and spas. These surgeries are also employed in cases of trauma, cancer treatment, and burn and accident recovery.

The most common cosmetic surgeries that are commonly carried out include breast augmentation, liposuction, nasal surgery, eyelid surgery and abdominoplasty. Two other common ones are rhinoplasty or facelift. Non-surgical ones include Botox and laser hair removal. Surgery India provides a plethora of surgical options, some of which are abdominoplasty or tummy tuck, blepharoplasty or eyelid surgery, phalloplasty or penile reconstruction, mammoplasty (breast augmentation, reduction and lift), lip enhancement, rhinoplasty (reshaping of nose), liposuction, otoplasty (reshaping of ears), chin and cheek augmentation, etc. Since the attention on beauty and perfection has been increasing drastically, people are being more and more obsessed with the concept of cosmetic surgery. Making one look good and highly presentable has become so important in today's world that people spend a considerable fortune on it. Such obsessions can lead to body dysmorphic disorder which is a type of mental illness in which the affected person is excessively concerned about his/her body image and considers him/her to have defected physical features. This may lead to diminished quality of life, presence of other ailments, social phobia and even suicidal tendencies in the worst case.
