If you are in tension due to the extra fat deposited on your body parts and want to lose it without putting any adverse impact on your health, then physical exercise is the best way to shed off extra weight, which should be done under the guidance and supervision of professional gym instructors or personal trainers.

In this article, we will throw light on various prominent aspects covered under personal training Vancouver such as basic concept of personal training, accreditation in Canada, different types of physical exercises recommended by personal trainers, captivating benefits of personal training, and much more, which will extend your knowledge about this crucial matter that can't be ignored in today's messy life and hectic schedule.

Personal Training

Personal training is the proper exercise prescription and instruction which is provided by the highly practiced and experienced trainers or gym instructors. In personal training, the goals are set before the beginning of physical work out and fitness assignments are done on the regular basis to check-out whether the client is near to that target or not. It is also done to figure out the strengths and weaknesses of clients.

Personal trainer provides feedback and accountability to clients to motivate them to get attractive physique or appealing curvaceous figure. Apart from physical exercises, the trainers also educate their clients about general health and nutrition guidelines. The motto behind their prescription & instructions is to provide improved body composition, physical performance and health outcomes to their valued clients.

Accreditation in Canada

In Canada, the certification of personal training differs by province. Some of the provinces of Canada are more strict and inflexible on regulation such as British Columbia, where British Columbia Recreation and Parks Association (BCRPA) controls all certifications. Alberta is not stringent on regulation, and considered to be the less regulated provinces. In Ontario, personal training school is regulated by only National Personal Training Institute (NPTI).

Physical Exercises Recommended By Personal Trainers

Depending on the overall impact of physical exercises on human body, they are classified into 3 groups which are mentioned below.

1. Flexibility exercises, like stretching of muscles.
2. Aerobic exercises, that include swimming, skipping rope, rowing, cycling, walking, running, playing tennis, hiking, focus on escalating cardiovascular stamina.
3. Anaerobic exercises, such as functional training, weight training, eccentric training or sprinting, increase temporary muscular strength.
