The most commonly used herbs and spices at Mexican restaurants are: annatto seed, which gives a distinctive flavour to foods like rice and sauces, azafran, which has a bitter flavour, basil, which is recommended in tomato dishes, cayenne, which adds extra hotness to the dishes, chillies which are available in an impressive range of sizes, varieties and levels of heat, cilantro, cinnamon, coriander seed, cumin seed, mint, nutmeg, oregano and sage. At a Mexican restaurant that respects the Mexican tradition, your food will be cooked with the above spices and herbs.

As you can see, Mexican cuisine is quite different from Australian food, this is why people love these unique flavours so much. Mexican food provides variety, and the good news is that you can go to a Mexican restaurant whenever you please and have a delicious meal.
