Some Rules and Regulations for Game Hunting in Texas by Julia Roger

Article published on May 15th 2012 | Gambling

If you have a passion and liking for exotic game hunting then Texas is the right location for you. Each year thousands of people visit the Texas hill country for hunting games and many organizations even conduct hunting trips to this region. People can have access to several ranches and can have the pleasure of hunting several exotic animals such as sheep, exotic deer and so on. Since, Texas is the second largest state; it has plenty of land to offer you for hunting purposes and enable you to earn a trophy. However, before embarking on the task, one must be aware of the rules and regulations that they have for hunting:

â€¢ Like all states, Texas has certain regulations and rules about the kind of weapon that one can use while killing species. For instance, for the killing of antelope, mule deer or whitetail, one is not allowed to use rimfire ammunitions under any circumstances. Again, for the purpose of deer hunting, one is forbidden to use air guns, pellet guns or even fully automatic fire arms.

â€¢ The authority is also very strict about the time of hunting. During open season, the hour of hunting usually begins one, half hour prior to sunrise, one, and half hour post sunset. One can confirm on the internet, the approximate time of sunrise and sunset in this region.

â€¢ The season of hunting is dependant on the kind of game you are willing to hunt. For instance, antelope can be hunted only during the beginning of October; the ideal time to hunt Whitetail deer is from the end of October to the middle of January. It is better to check the time before visiting the place.

â€¢ Apart from the law of the state or land, many areas have local regulations and norms which must be abided by.

â€¢ Securing a permit for hunting is very important or else it may lead to severe punishment like fine or imprisonment. Thus, following the above set of rules, organize exotic hunting trips to Texas and places, which offer you the scope to hunt game.
