Part heavy-armored melee fighter, part magic-user, the Guild Wars 2 Guardian is a powerful class with unique features. As a spiritual successor of the Paragon, the Guardian uses shouts and buffs to support the entire party while smashing through enemies on the battlefield. One of the unique new skills for this class includes the four different Spirit Weapons. This Guild Wars 2 guide gives some details on what these do.

Spirit weapons are ethereal weapons summoned by the Guardian. As sequence skills, they can't be interrupted. Up to three weapons can be activated at a time. They will automatically attack an enemy or target allies and the player, yet they can't be attacked by the enemy themselves. Their duration is limited, but the Guardian can use skill called "Command" to dismiss them early for special abilities.

The Bow of Truth, the first spirit weapon, is a great healing tool. When it is summoned, it will remove negative conditions to the targets in a limited area. When the Guardian uses the Bow command to activate its second ability, the Bow of Truth will shoot a barrage of arrows that heal at its location.

The Hammer of Wisdom works well for both defense and knock-downs. When summoned, the Hammer of Wisdom defends the Guardian with a three-hit chain. The final hit in the chain causes a knockback. When the Guardian gives the Hammer Command, it knocks down the enemy for three seconds.

The Shield of the Avenger defends the Guardian by absorbing any incoming projectiles and also pushing foes back. When the Guardian activates the Shield Command, the Shield will fly out, doing 122 damages and causing weakness on multiple enemies for six seconds. The Shield disappears after the Command is given.

The fourth Spirit weapon is the Sword of Justice. It will do 694 points of damage. After the Sword Command is issued, the Sword strikes the ground at its location, damaging nearby foes for a total of 2,308 points.

Knowing details of the special Spirit weapon abilities will lead the Guardian take full advantage of both offensive and defensive role
