When you have a special problem such as an issue with the surface of your teeth, dental veneers can be very helpful. It is important to understand that this is an option that covers the outer surface of the tooth but is different from orthodontist care.

Today there are many different options for repairing your teeth. Choices can include dental veneers, orthodontist care or dental implants. When you have choices, you will be able to decide which option will work best for you. Two types of orthodontist care are common today including steel braces as well as invisible ones.

Orthodontist care is done to improve the alignment of the teeth in most cases. However there are situations where the need for this type of care is due to other problems such as a narrow jaw that needs to be expanded or other issues with the jaw itself. Using specific processes, orthodontists are able to straighten the teeth as well as help to align the jaw.

Dental veneers are fitted to the individual tooth and glued in place. Dental veneers will then be trimmed to fit perfectly with the other tooth. The colour of the dental veneers is controlled by the glue which is used to attach it to the actual tooth surface.

Dental veneers and orthodontist care can be used for the existing teeth to help improve the appearance of the tooth. Dental implants however will be used when there is an issue with the tooth and it must be removed. Dental implants will be used if there is no problem with the jaw bone.

If a tooth is lost or must be removed, a person might choose to have dental implants put in rather than using a bridge or dentures. Dental implants can be used as long as there are no complications involving the jaw bone. In some instances the jaw bone may be damaged by disease or injury and dental implants will not be an option.

Any time there is a problem with any of your teeth, you will want to have the issues repaired. Options including dental veneers, orthodontist care and dental implants can help you improve the appearance as well as resolve any issues that you may have been experiencing as a result of the problem. For example, tooth decay can cause a great deal of pain for someone. By having a variety of choices for the repairs, you will have a great deal of flexibility when it comes to the overall appearance as well as the cost.
