Not everyone has great toothpaste commercial-worthy teeth, and sometimes this isn't even a person's fault. Although a lot of people get bad teeth because of poor dental hygiene, genetics and other factors also affect what kind of teeth you're going to get. So if you have bad teeth, regardless of the cause, what can be done about it?

For complex cases like dental misalignment or missing teeth, dentists usually turn to common dental services such as braces, dentures, or dental implants. For those concerned with the aesthetics of their teeth, though, one can opt to learn more about dental veneers. Veneers are wafer-like shells, usually made of porcelain, that are placed on chipped or misshapen teeth to reshape them, or to dark or discolored teeth to whiten them.

A lot of people get veneers to drastically improve the way they look and get that smile they've always wanted. This usually involves three trips to the dentist. The first visit is for consultation—this is where your dentist takes X-rays and impressions of your teeth and where you can also tell your dentist what you expect to achieve with the veneers.

Your second visit would involve the dentist removing at least half a millimeter of enamel from your teeth's surface, which is about the same thickness as the veneer that's going to take its place. If you suffer from dental phobia, be sure to tell your dentist about it so some form of relaxant can be administered. This ranges from mild sedatives like laughing gas to general anesthetic for deep sedation.

The cosmetic dentist Greenville SC residents trust will then make a model of your teeth, which is then sent to a laboratory where veneers are made. Veneers can take two to three weeks to prepare.

Your third visit to a cosmetic dentist Greenville SC residents trust is for installing the veneers onto your teeth. Your teeth will be cleaned and polished and the veneers trimmed just enough to ensure a perfect fit. A special kind of cement will be placed on the veneer to help it bond to your tooth, while a special light is shined onto the teeth and veneer to ensure they bond fast and strong.

With dental veneers, you can smile and talk with confidence, knowing that your teeth are in perfect shape. For more information on procedures related to cosmetic dentistry Greenville SC dentists provide, you can visit CosmeticDentistryVeneers.org.
