Modern Hair Salons in the UK by Tony Unger

Article published on January 23rd 2012 | Health

Choosing a new hairstyle and having the courage to go through with a radical change can be quite hard, especially if you have been wearing the same style for many years. However, with the support of a professional stylist, it is possible to alter the way that you look without becoming a nervous wreck in the process. Most towns in the United Kingdom are home to at least one decent salon and often boast a choice of several different establishments, some of which may cater to a particular demographic.

Whilst many men may still prefer the no-nonsense atmosphere and speedy service that can be experienced in a traditional barber's shop, those that are looking for something extra have the option of going to many of the same places as the ladies. A fair proportion of stylists run unisex shops and offer a warm welcome to males as well as females. Women may choose to visit an old-fashioned hairdressing establishment that provides a simple service at a reasonable price but more and more people are choosing to take their custom to hair salons that offer a full range of services and are happy to advise their clients if necessary.

Nowadays, it is not uncommon to find an establishment that has a resident beautician as well as a choice of stylists, enabling customers to have a manicure, pedicure or facial at the same time as they have their hair cut. This one-stop shop approach appeals to busy career women as well as anybody that simply enjoys being pampered every now and then and is quite different to the kind of hairdressing establishments that people used to frequent in the past.

Making yourself look presentable may still be the main reason to visit a stylist but if there is a choice between one that simply cuts to order and one that will make suggestions and help to steer clients in the right direction when they want to update their look, many people will choose the latter. It is also nice to be able to converse with your stylist about topics that are relevant to the setting, such as the latest fashions and new hair care products, rather than having to listen to the same old questions about where you are going on holiday etcetera.
