Article published on January 9th 2012 | Health

As one of the growing and serious businesses, medical transcription has been in demand with healthcare organizations outsourcing the work to competent agencies around the globe. The benefits of outsourcing medical transcription are many and have proved to be cost-effective and convenient. Besides the fact that outsourcing companies can save energy and time, there are other factors that contribute to the advantages of outsourcing. The medical transcription company that gets into a contract with the outsourcing company or companies has a team of transcriptionists who are versatile, talented and competent being trained in all medical transcription specialties. This has added to the benefits as the main outsourcing company can be confident about the final result of the transcripts.

With the outsourced work being delegated to the chosen medical transcription company, the outcome besides satisfying the client also becomes a one-stop shop for all medical transcription needs. The dictated report is transferred with EMR interface that enables full document flow management with transfer of files through FTP. Listened by the transcriptionists through headphones, the dictated files would be in digital or analog format. The expert team at the medical transcription company would render a complete report that ranges over medical records such as operation reports, patient's history, progress notes, emergency room reports, referral letters, discharge summaries, consultation reports, initial evaluation reports, MRI scans, admissions, subjective objective assessment plan and a gamut of medical records.

Save Time and Energy with a Competent Medical Transcription Agency

The medical transcription company would adhere to the HIPAA and HITECH standards of the healthcare industry and conform to the safety and privacy of all medical records. The outsourcing company would ensure that the medical transcription module should possess and comply with these important standards. As one of the benefits of outsourcing medical transcription, the healthcare organization would save on infrastructure, training and hiring of the right personnel to handle transcription needs. With the ever-burgeoning growth of the healthcare industry and the workload that has increased its dimensions in manifold, the healthcare units can outsource the work at a lesser price by cutting down on 40-60% of their costs thereby eliminating the handling and delegation of work for in-house transcriptionists.

With many benefits adding to the convenience of medical transcription outsourcing, health care organizations are offered 99% accuracy, data storage with digital archiving, skilled transcriptionists handling critical work and expert teams rendering flawless transcription with language competency and knowledge in medical terms. Medical transcription companies also offer the latest in technology with security of data and confidentiality. Medical transcription outsourcing takes out the time consuming recruitment factor and the man-hours lost in the process thereby lending seamlessness in the delivery of transcripts. The turnaround time of work is leveraged with the difference in the time zone which helps in quality, quantity with the backlog of work being reduced. With healthcare organizations concentrating on core businesses, their resources can be focused on other ventures as outsourcing opens out new dimensions in business issues.
