However, there are times when surgery becomes the first and last resort. Especially, in bone replacement treatment. When a patient has a severe damage in the ligament or the problem is due to a deficiency, then non-surgical procedures do not come into play as much. Surgery becomes the last resort and one has no way but to go for it.

We suggest when such a situation comes; you do a proper online search to know what could be the long term and short term repercussions of the surgery or hip replacement India surgery that the doctor has suggested. Why we are asking you to do your own research is because, sometimes the doctors and the medical team will not tell you everything. This is primarily because most of the times, cases and effects change based on patient's ability to cope and his internal body condition. Therefore, one should not blame the doctor for not giving complete information and rather be sure about things themselves.

The most common orthopedic procedures that are performed on a regular basis are hip replacement India, and total knee replacement surgery in India. Unlike partial knee replacement, hip replacement India and total knee replacement in India is a more detailed procedure in which the complete graft is changed and replaced with a new prosthesis in order to ease pain. While it is a very safe procedure and orthopedic surgeons in Delhi claim of having a great success record in performing this. In fact, most people also believe that orthopedic surgeons in Delhi are the best in doing so, still sometimes, few complications arise. Nevertheless, be rest assured, all these complications can be handled with effective follow-up checks. However, it is important to know what the possibilities are.

Always check with the doctor on the material used for the graft. While, there are many materials like fiber grafts, metallic grafts, it is important to use the type of material that will be a most comfortable fit for the patient's body.

The follow-up schedule should be organized. If you think, the patient will have a problem managing the dates and attending the sessions post surgery, then request the doctor to make your schedule more flexible. Missing follow-up schedules can only give rise to more complications.

Do not hesitate to discuss with the doctor about any other issue if you think has aroused after the surgery. It might have a connection with the surgery and therefore you should not take it lightly.
