

Article published on August 7th 2012 | Health

Chiropractors are licensed professionals that provide chiropractic care to clients. Chiropractors focus on providing holistic treatment and they are very skilled and experienced in doing spinal manipulations. Chiropractic believes that in order for a body to be healthy, the spine should be aligned. Any spinal subluxation can weaken the body and make it prone to illness and diseases. Chiropractors cannot practice without a license and they have to pass the national exam to obtain their license. Who gives chiropractic licensing to chiropractors? What is this board all about?

The Federation of Chiropractors Licensing Board or FCLB was established back in 1926 but its first meeting was held in 1919. The purpose of the FCLB is to deal with maintaining the high and uniform standards of chiropractic licensing, chiropractic regulations, chiropractic education and chiropractic discipline. The FCLB is non-profit and it gets its monetary support from conference fees, donations and member dues. The dues come from the chiropractors with active licenses. The FCLB corporation have annual conference and regular meetings where members can exchange ideas and opinions on current chiropractic issues. The FCLB has the power to regulate chiropractic practices in all of the states in the U.S., Mexico, Australia, Canada and many more.

The duty of this chiropractic licensing board is to protect consumers as well as help the members in promoting excellent chiropractic services. A board like this is necessary to ensure that chiropractors are following standard procedure and uniform standards when practicing chiropractic treatments. This is to assure the public that only qualified, competent chiropractors are given the license, and these doctors of chiropractors are well trained and educated.

As mentioned, the FCLB is not a profit corporation, which means that its ultimate duty is to help out. How does it stay alive all these years? The financial support from groups and people are keeping the board afloat. People who believe in the mission of the FCLB donate monetary support to keep the FCLB going.

Over the years, the FCLB has built strong relationship ties with other chiropractic organizations. One of which is the National Board of Chiropractic Examiners. These two non-profit organizations are two autonomous entities but they work together to ensure that chiropractors are well trained and educated. The NBCE helps the FCLB with its office space, equipment and furniture. The NBCE's financial support has done great things for FCLB and they are very appreciative. Another organization that helps FCLB is the American Chiropractic Association. It gives $2,500 a year to help with the cost of maintaining excellent chiropractic regulations.

Why is knowing this important? Chiropractic is not a medical practice, which leads people to doubt its legitimacy. People have to experience chiropractic care for them to speak about it. The significance of the FCLB and the other regulating boards is to ensure the public that chiropractic is safe and that chiropractors go through the eye of the needle just so they can legally practice their profession. Chiropractic licensing bodies should be visible to the public because this gives consumers peace of mind and confidence to try chiropractic care.

Article Source:

<http://www.articleside.com/health-articles/who-gives-chiropractic-licensing-to-chiropractors.htm> - Article Side

Naidaknoth - About Author:

If you're in pain or are finally tired of dealing with your health problem, you want to get in right away and find out what's wrong. Discover the Gresham Chiropractor Making a Difference in the Health of the Community. Reach at 1155 NE Hogan Drive, Gresham, OR 97030 or Call on (503) 667-3366 or visit a www.greathhealthchiropractic.com

Article Keywords:

gresham chiropractor, gresham oregon chiropractor

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!