There are several roofing styles that you can choose for your dream home. However, it is important that you should consider the assistance of a roofing contractor and an architect to choose a roof style. You should also consider the weather, and ventilation when choosing a particular type of roof. However, the 5 most popular roof styles for your dream homes are as follows.

Hip Roof

It is one of the most popular types of roof, despite varying weather condition and needs people prefer this style. Moreover, it is also a bit difficult to construct and also has its disadvantages, however, it remains one of the most favorite among home owners. It is also poor in ventilation and can even have leakage problem, but when you have experts from roofing services for your assistance, you do not have to worry much.

Gable Roof

If advantages of this style are to be considered, then it should make the best choice of any home owner. Gable roof is ideally suited for any type of weather condition and most of all you do not have to worry about ventilation problem; moreover, there is neither the problem of leakage nor of water logging. Proficient Roofing contractors advise to prefer this roof type over any other style.

A-frame roof

Normally it was used for cottages, however, nowadays; it is used over all sorts of buildings. As a major advantage, this roof keeps your home well shielded from the outside weather. Therefore, it is better for harsh weather conditions.

Flat roof

It can be considered as one of the most common type of roof that you have come across. But, with the change in time, this roof is not in use. Still it remains one of the most popular among the home owners who do not have worry about weather conditions.

Shed Roof

It is similar to flat roof, but the pitch of the roof is not similar to it. Moreover, you can also use this type is for additional structure. However, the other aforesaid styles are to be used essentially with new structure, or you have to completely change the existing structure.

Other than the aforementioned styles, you can also choose from other styles. However, you need to consult a roofing contractor in Surrey and architecture to make sure, whether your existing structure can bear the load of a particular type of roof. Moreover, if you want to install certain type of roof for your house, then also you need to ensure, if it is compatible for a particular roof style.
