Are the lifts in your building in need of Lift Modernisation? by Mary Porter

Article published on June 20th 2012 | Home Improvement

Many of us work in office buildings or other premises which have lifts that have been installed for some years and are not pleasant places to spend any amount of time, but there are lift modernisation options available which could help to make sure that lifts work well but are also presentable and look professional.

There are a number of different levels of lift modernisation work available, from complete renovations and replacements to more simple lift modernisation jobs, and the right lift modernisation firm will be able to provide any option customers need, and also advise them on the proper lift modernisation solutions for their needs.

Working with companies that have a great knowledge of lifts and the specific requirements of different kinds, from passenger to residential, is also key.

Here at Swallow Lifts we can tackle any kind of lift modernisation services, from work on small passenger lifts to single phase lift options and residential lifts, and our company enjoys a rich heritage and experience which spans more than 60 years.

We are committed to offering lift installation, lift modernisation and lift servicing of the very best standard, and all of our lift modernisation work is carried out with the quality standards of ISO9001/2000. We were the first lift company to receive accreditation to OHSAS 180001 and this shows that our lift modernisation work and other servicing is carried out to an impeccable standard.

To ensure that the absolute best standards are always maintained we have a strict policy of restricting the number of installations we take on in any given year. We currently restrict ourselves to 100 units per annum and this means that our lift modernisation team and design resources do not become overstretched.

If you are interested in lift modernisation then visit our website and take a look at our recent projects page.

Here at Swallow Lifts we specialise in lift modernisation and our talented and knowledgeable team can work on any kind of lift modernisation job. If you are looking for the right lift modernisation firm to work on your building or premises we can assist, so get in touch with us and tell us about your needs.
