While over bearing bosses and back biting colleagues can be a real pain in the behind, what could be even more annoying in offices is the furniture. Imagine a day when you have had to go through all the drama with the superiors and return to a desk that is piled with rubbish and a chair that adds to your miseries. You can almost always trip on your neighbor's legs and seldom get to stretch your limbs after hours of sitting at the desk. Whatever could be a worse nightmare than this. A person spends a chunk of his / her life in the office. If calculated on an average, this will be close to one third of every day. This is quite a long time and what happens within this span can affect the entire day or, even the life of the employee.

There are a number of things that cannot be corrected in an office, politics and back biting being among them.
