Before we begin our journey throwing some light on Art Nouveau dining room suite, let's take a walk on the path leading to Art Nouveau.

Art Nouveau is an intercontinental philosophy and style of art, architecture and applied art, especially the ornamental arts that were on immense popularity during 1890-1910. It is a French name for 'new art'. It is also known by the name of Jugendstil, which is a German name for 'young style' that was named of the magazine Jugend. Art Nouveau was on its peak in Europe, but its influence had taken over the entire world. Therefore, it is known in diverse appearances with frequent localised tendencies. Even though Art Nouveau was replaced by 20th century modernist styles, it is contemplated now as a crucial evolution between the historicism of Neoclassicism and modernization. In addition, Art Nouveau monuments are now recognized by UNESCO with their World Heritage List as important contributions to cultural heritage.

Some of the characteristics of Art Nouveau's actual art on canvas are the following points:

• An artist should work on everything from architecture to furniture design so that art would become a part of mundane life. Artists improve people's lives by making exquisiteness and harmony a part of their lives. This approach has been symbolized in painting, architecture

• Typical flat, appealing patterns

• Nickname 'the noodle style'

• Flat, decorative patterns, entangled organic forms of stems or flowers

• Principal subjects are lavish birds and flowers, insects and polymorphic femme fatale

• Conceptual lines and shapes and used comprehensively as a filling for recognizable subject matter

• Striking objects of art, but not necessarily very purposeful

In spite of its strong significance on nature, Art Nouveau dining room suite was primarily an urban style, which was created to smarten the interiors of contemporary industrial cities that had expanded swiftly during the last third of nineteenth century. The cities represented in the exhibition display the international variations of Art Nouveau. At the turn of the twentieth century, Art Nouveau brushed through the cities of North America and Europe, exhibiting the novelty and complexity of the present age. While some aspects such as its flowery curvilinear designs, vanished rapidly while others influenced later art and design movements.

From around 1890 to 1920, the Art Nouveau movement was expressed in a range of art forms from furniture, architecture and interior design to posters, glass, pottery, textiles and book illustration. Art Nouveau was also used for interior design. Although named after Maison de l'Art Nouveau, a Parisian shop that was established in 1896 by art dealer Siegfried Bing, this style had its roots in the Arts and Crafts movement in England that revived handmade crafts.
