

Article Side

Replacement Windows: Styles to Beautify Your Kentucky Home by Raphael Jeanfrancois

Article published on May 23rd 2012 | Home Improvement

When was the last time you had a home improvement project? If you can't remember or simply muttered "What's so great about home improvement?", you're probably living in a house that's as old as time. Home improvements are a great way to boost your house's curb appeal, improve your living condition, and make your house more of a "home". There are a number of ways to improve your home, and changing your weather-beaten windows can be a great start.

Replacement windows are installed in place of old windows that refuse to close properly and don't offer energy savings. These days, replacement windows are built with stronger materials such as vinyl and fiberglass. Manufacturers also guarantee the energy efficiency of their replacement windows. Although functionality is important, choosing the right style of a window can totally change the way your house looks and you might even impress the neighbors. Here are a few styles that you might want to consider for your Kentucky home:

Casement Windows

Do you love breathing in fresh air while feeling its light touch on your skin? Casement windows with hinges located on one side and which opens widely at an angle is sure to catch the passing breeze for you. Casement windows are wide enough to give you a full view of the outside even when it's tightly shut. This window style can blend with almost any type of architecture and lends a welcoming ambiance to any home.

Bay Windows

A bay window is a window replacement Louisville homeowners can choose to magically transform a cramped room into a roomy and brighter place. Bay windows are a combination of three windows that project outward in the middle with the outer side windows angled back toward the wall. They maximize space, provide multiple views, and allow natural light to brighten a room.

Awning Windows

If you're looking for replacement windows to perfectly match your historic home, Lexington windows contractors would be quick to recommend traditional awning windows. This style of window is hinged on the top part and open outward. Awning windows are usually installed above a door, sink, or counter because they're quite easy to open. You can keep them open even when it's raining without worries that water will splash in through their corners.

Bow Windows

Similar to a bay window, bow windows are composed of windows that project outward from the wall. Instead of being angular, bow windows form a semi-circle or arch that looks elegant and sophisticated. If you want more uniqueness to your window, there are window replacement Louisville contractors who specialize in combining bow windows with other styles. For more information about replacement window styles, you may visit ezinearticles.com.

Article Source:

<http://www.articleside.com/home-improvement-articles/replacement-windows-styles-to-beautify-your->

kentucky-home.htm - Article Side

Raphael Jeanfrancois - About Author:

For more details, search a Lexington windows and a window replacement Louisville in Google for related information.

Article Keywords:

lexington windows, window replacement louisville

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!