Title insurance, a predominant form of indemnity insurance which guards against financial losses ranging from real property to defects in title including variations from the invalidity to inexecutability of mortgage liens. [title insurance agency] is principally an outcome of supposed comparative shortcomings of the laws regarding the U.S. land records. It is devised to protect a lender's or an owner's interests (financial) in real estate property against losses owing to the title defects, lien or other matters. It will shield against a lawsuit bothering the title which is insured, or refund the insured amount for the actual monetary loss encountered, up to the sum of insurance offered by the policy.

Actually the real property interests assured include fee simple ownership or may be a mortgage. The Title insurance is acquired to insure interests in real property, varying from a lease, easement to life estate.

Title insurance is a loan policy and is of two types of policies are accessible- owner and loan. Similar to lenders strategy of requiring fire insurance as well the other sorts of insurance covers in order to protect their hefty investment, almost every institutional lender also requires protecting their interests in the deposits of loans tenable by real estate. Credit lenders, especially the non-institutional ones, may seek this insurance. But the fact is that buyers purchasing property for cash or with a mortgage lender usually demand [property transactions]. A loan policy provides no coverage or monetary advantage for the buyers or the owner, thus the choice to buy an owner policy is self-determining and not dependant on the lender's judgment to involve a loan policy.

United States is the initiator country of Title insurance, though the Title insurance is available in many other countries including , Australia, Canada, the United Kingdom, New Zealand, Mexico, Japan, Korea, China and several other countries in Europe. Though in these countries, U.S insures a significant number of properties. However in these countries, title insurers do not comprise a momentous share of the real estate dealings. The U.S. title insurers' do not provide substantial revenue.

We can summarise that each time title transactions of land takes place, the parties involved document the transfer instrument with the recorder jurisdiction of local government located in the county where the land is situated.
