For the business owners and CEOs, the budgeting is one of the most important facet of their business strategy. It is the process to find out how much revenue your company or firm can generate for the next five to ten years. Moreover, itâ€™ll also help you find out that how much money your company require to produce that much revenue and thus helping you improve your companyâ€™s model. To a normal person, it is just a method of knowing that much more money you want so that you can produce desirable profits next years with the help of multiplication and percentages. However, if youâ€™re redoing your budget in this way, then it is nothing but waste of time for you as well as your company. It will ensure nothing and in fact, damage your companyâ€™s chances to succeed in a long term. Therefore, budgeting becomes an important tool to stabilize your company in a long run. This process revolves around finding out what products and businesses provided by your company bring you the maximum and a stable input of income and profits. Moreover, it also helps you in finding out what other services you provide have a high growth potential in the near future as well as cost required to producing these products or running these businesses.

Therefore, budgeting is not only the process to find out how much you need to spend and how much will you earn next year, but it is also the process of reviewing how you have performed in the past one year. For example, we took a company that provides business-training services and found out that half of their revenue the previous year came from the Advanced excel training course. However, when they looked at the result, they were surprised as their main motive was to use this course as an advertisement for their consultancy services. Therefore, thanks to this budgeting review they found an additional line of business and decided to put more resources into it and make it a new income stream. Moreover, at the same time they put aside a particular amount of resources so that they can launch a new solution service which cut short their budgeting time into half, however, with the help of budget planners they could have consolidate these numbers at the click of a button.

Therefore, with a budgeting plan in place, you can easily be able to study the impact of existing business separately and thus find out how theyâ€™re faring and how much profitable will be introducing a new line of business on the existing bottom line. Therefore, without this process, weâ€™ll be shooting in the dark and this will eventually slow down the growth of our income stream.

Moreover, budgeting is also a fruitful method for the management, as they generally donâ€™t have enough time to follow up with the activities. This way they can transfer the project to someone suitable and then this person can then fully concentrate on the work in hand. Moreover, if this project shows some worrying signs then the person or the management can then schedule an adhoc review to find out the mistakes or to bring the project back on track by putting in more resources, which can only be possible with the help of Budgeting.
