Social Media Networks Influencing Buying Behavior by Alex Smith

Article published on June 13th 2012 | Internet Business

Facebook and Twitter are in the fashion and people all across the world are connecting with each other through these powerful platforms. Unquestionably, it is the fastest evolving platform encouraging people and businesses to relate, share, distribute and communicate with each other. It is a perfect example of information/views/beliefs/facts/reviews sharing platform. Its prominence and potency cannot be underestimated. In fact, it is the major platform through which rankings and traffic can be managed. Indeed, it attracts immense traffic and organic rankings for businesses. In essence, it can directly impact Google search results.

Today, you can find many paid search ads, but when it comes to organic traffic and rankings, Facebook and Twitter are the best examples. Connected consumers are often influenced by each other and they want to share everything on the web, which is affecting the buying behavior of the consumers. They use social platforms like Facebook in order to ask each other for advice, they observe and follow trends and make decisions. Here, the complete scenario is revolving around social networks only and therefore, businesses are harnessing this platform to attract potential customers.

Unquestionably, social media is greatly influencing business marketing and advertising. This is why businesses are turning towards high-end communication technologies including, but not limited to, social networks, blogging, mobile phone applications, etc. These mediums can alone influence consumers, which certainly helps in building brand. However, Facebook marketing is the top marketing tool and has the capacity to magnetize consumers. Internet marketing companies offer inclusive Facebook likes, fans and invites services to real people that can become your fans in order grow and prosper your business in the defined niche.

These companies create your personal Facebook Page and can customize your new page with your company/business logo, videos, product images, links that point to your website. It is the best means of attracting customers. The companies exert their efforts to build your Facebook Page that will help your company/product/service to catch attention and collect new fans. It certainly brings exposure to your brand and unlimited traffic for your website. It eventually grows sales and market reputation at the same time.

In essence, the rapid surge of social networks has allowed consumers to stay connected with each other. As a result, businesses as well as consumers are more intimately watching each other to communicate and transact. Both want to make a perfect relation and carry on the legacy through these sturdy platforms. As of today, Facebook is the direct influencer and can alone direct purchasing behavior of the people.
