Discover the Best Forex Affiliate Program with Useful Tips by Thomas Lowell

Article published on February 3rd 2012 | Investing

It is a hard reality that not all business enterprises that have their own individual affiliate scheme are fully sincere with their members. This is just as true in the field of foreign exchange as it is in any other field. Hence, why do they attempt and mislead their associates, and how can you find out the best forex affiliate program that is completely reliable?

One of several causes why they might be somewhat untrustworthy is that they evidently prefer to hold as much cash as possible with them, instead of paying off a percent of every instance of selling to their affiliates. In the forex world, this can vary between 20 percent and 75 percent of the original sale price, so there are obvious intentions for acting like this.

One means to recognize the best forex affiliate programs and check whether a business might not be paying you the associate commissions you must earn is by considering the rate of conversion. The reality is that even the most inadequate schemes with shoddily planned sales pages can frequently yield a rate of conversion of no less than 1%. Therefore, if you are directing thousands of potential customers to the sales page and just producing a couple of sales, then they might not be passing you the due recognition for the sales you create.

Most preferably, you would like to join the best forex affiliate program where all visitors as well as all sales are entered and visible in your statistics and reports page. An effective means to try this out is to fetch your associate link and click on it, for example 10 times right through the day. Subsequently, you can sign in and verify if these 10 clicks are registered in your associate report. You can also pay an acquaintance to purchase the product you are advertising by making use of your link to ascertain if this instance of selling does actually turn up in the statistics page.

One more widespread strategy is to present a striking preference form on the sales page so as to obtain prospective clients and sell them the item by responding in a succession automatically. There is nothing incorrect in this approach, given that the lead is recorded as you will then receive recognition for any sales that might take place from this. Nevertheless, a large number of agencies hold back all of these succeeding follow-through sales with themselves, which is unquestionably fraudulent, since you are primarily responsible for sending them these prospects.

In the end, another mode to identify a dishonest FX affiliate program is by focusing on how frequently you really receive the payment. Fortunately, there are not many businesses that will deny paying off, but it can take place in several cases, especially with agencies you were not familiar with earlier.

Hence, the providers of forex affiliate schemes can deceive their associates in many ways. Nonetheless, the number of the best forex affiliate programs is many. The businesses running these schemes are authentic and deal with their members considerably with precise stats and timely payouts.
