Unite Trade of Union has decided to discard any reforms in the existing government pension plan for them. The chief secretary of finance minister has introduced a brushed up pension plan outlining some changes in benefits and ages. The government is very wishful of the settlement of clash over government pension scheme when the leader of union has discarded to accept the final face of pension plan. On the other side, a group of teachers had also rejected the new pension plan revised by government authority and are not in mood to give their approval for it.

The secretary of union has said that the safety of their members in the last stage of their job is too significant to consent any way for uncertainty, and thus they had discarded the reviewed plans of government pension. Their senior councils think that they do not have any options besides denying the values of document when the official had appealed that the employee's union had made promise that was not debated.

Leaders of the entire government employee's group would be meeting in coming two or three days to discuss on the final face of pension scheme, while the employees would organize the meetings to debate for their next planning of the movement.

The government had boarded, last year, on the dialogues to instrument a two layered scheme to blow huge of money off the charges of stretched time for providing pensions for employees in very part of the government division. The pension scheme covers all the employees from government sector comprising of education, health, civil services and local authority. It is said that the government wishes to strap in the expenditure shortfall.

The scheme comes with two layers where first one is meant to rear the employee's input. From 2012 to 2015, the employee's contribution is about to rise by 3.1%. Second stage ensures your movement towards new plans. Almost all the employees would shift to the new stage of career average plans. Though, the lower classes of employees would be kept free from compensating greater inputs. On the other side, the employee who is under ten years of his/her retirement ages would be staying in the existing schemes. Where the Unite union and NHS group have discarded the scheme, Unison, the biggest group of employee, is still about to take decision and would be recently pronouncing its stand.

The first face of the government pension plan had also witnessed very huge rejection by the public servant in last November which shows that do don't think anything good for them in this plan. And really it is very hard on government to imply this plan being discarded by many public servant of this country.
