- 2.If you are employed in a temporary job.
- 3.The employer under whom you were working was using some unsuitable tax information.
- 4.If you were employed at more than two places at the same time.
- 5.You have stopped working and were not getting any tax earnings for the rest of the year.
- 6.The stature of your income has changed. For example, you have changed from a permanent job holder to a temporary or a part time one or when you have started a self employed role.
- 7.You have other forms of income in which you were taxed with the help of your tax code like the reserves and the investment income etc. In case such alternative incomes have decreased in value since the last time you informed the tax department, then too, you are eligible for claiming tax rebate.
- 8.You were employed in such a role that resulted in a reserve tax code assignment on a temporary basis.

In case you have reasons why you had to pay too much tax on your salary even after a self assessment, then you need not worry. There are some tax office instructions that can help you in figuring out how to get the tax refund help. In case you feel that the income tax office owes you a refund, then you can look for claiming tax rebate by sending an application to the income tax department.

For this, you need to send an application to the local income tax department and attach any applicable documentation relevant to your salary for the tax year and seek the tax refund help. The income tax department would look into your applications and the doubts that you have regarding the tax that you have paid in order to analyze the amount that the income tax department owes to you so that they can offer a tax settlement.

Thus claiming tax rebate is not a difficult job, all you need to do is go through a self assessment of the tax that you have paid on your earned salary for the specific taxable year.
