Sapphires have been blessed naturally with a number of beautiful colors and when set in rings, make sparkling jewels for special occasions. Though rubies and diamonds have long been the preferential choice for weddings, anniversaries and engagements, the inherent sparkle and vibrancy of a colorful sapphire is unmatched and increasingly being appreciated.

Besides the very popular blue sapphire rings, there are many other choices; pink, yellow, white, purple and few fancy colors. Each of these colors reflects unique magnificence and may be chosen for rings for special moments in life. Especially for engagements, where more than tradition and norms it is the individual's style and contemporary trend considered, sapphire rings are perhaps the ideal choice. The intense yet warm colors of these precious gemstones may be beautifully crafted into rings for the special day.

Sapphires are available in an impressive range of cuts and shapes; the timeless classic round, pear, oval and emerald, and also the exquisite heart, cushion, marquise, square and trillion cuts. Keeping in view the person's preference, the size, cut and carat of the loose sapphires may be chosen and set into a ring. There are three ways to choose a sapphire engagement ring; may be bought as a preset ring or may be designed on own or may be custom-made.

Most of the gemstone jewelry stores including the online shops have a fine range of preset sapphire rings which one may browse through and select one for the occasion. If unable to find one of choice, then loose sapphires may be carefully selected and set into a desired ring setting. Usually a ring has a solitaire setting, three-stone setting, setting with matching band, cluster stone setting or an intricate designer setting. Perhaps, none of these may be appealing to you; therefore to possess a truly one-of-a-kind sapphire ring for the special day, it is suggested to place an order for a custom-made ring.

It is usually perceived that custom jewelry is owned by the rich and famous, but, that is not the case. Few established jewelers offer to make exclusive rings for customers in an easy process. The most important aspect is the design of the ring which you need to give the jeweler in the form of a sketch or an image of the ring. The selection of individual loose sapphires for the ring and also diamonds or any other gemstone if needed for the design must be done carefully. Especially, the colors of the sapphires must complement the attire for the engagement day and hence more attention must be given to it. With the image of the ring the jeweler then proceeds to make a wax model of the same which would be trial-fitted to check the comfort level and the correctness of the provided design to the wax ring. Once approved, the ring takes about two weeks to complete.

Thus, with a little added effort an exclusively personal sparkling sapphire engagement ring is ready for her for the very special celebration in life.
